

Students Should Have More Pocket Money

Students don't have money to buy what they need, they just have little pocket money! They can't buy anything! Parents don't want to give students more money. They think that students don't know how to spend money wisely, but to only buy some snacks, even though students really need to buy something for studying.

In my opinion, students should have $170 or more pocket money to make sure they can buy what they need. If students have more pocket money, they will be able to buy new stationary, novels, exercise books and so on to get better grades. I think parents should trust students and give them more pocket money.
